Richard Mayer's Thirteenth Multimedia Principle:

EMBODIMENT PRINCIPLE

People learn more deeply when on-screen agents display humanlike gesturing, movement, eye contact, and facial expressions.

Example: Including a human asset with natural features to better appeal to participants.

Reference: Mayer, R. (2020). Multimedia learning. (3rd ed.). Cambridge University Press.

elearningdesigners.org